Selective activation of platelet CD40 receptor accelerates myocardial ischemia reperfusion injury. To investigate whether CD40/CD154-mediated signaling on platelets can aggravate myocardial ischemia reperfusion injury (IRI) in mice. Using platelet-targeted CD40 activation or CD154 blockade as a molecular strategy to dissect the mechanisms of platelet CD40-mediated signaling in IRI. Cardiac microembolization was performed to establish a mouse model of IRI. The infarct size and cardiac function were measured after the microembolization.
